THE PAN Trinbago impasse was sparked off by the complacency of a Central Executive which had lost touch with developments within the steelband movement.

Yesterday, six former officials of the steelband body disclosed that problems were inevitable because the leadership of the organisation had become too officeoriented and was not paying attention to the problems facing panmen.

Spokesman for the group, Mr. Nestor Sullivan, former vice-president, said that a power struggle was brewing within the executive at the time that the six officials tendered their resigna-

During a Press briefing yesterday, Mr. Sullivan said that a split in the executive developed at the beginning of this year when the emphasis shifted from keeping in touch with the group's member-ship to carrying out office duties.

"For the year the executive has not held a single general meeting or pan jamboree. Differences of opinion have become the preoccupa-tion of the Pan Trinbago leadership and this created the opening for trouble-makers who always envied the unity our group enjoy-ed," he said.

MINOR CHANGES

"Even before that, panmen in the East and in South had begun to express dissatisfaction with the operation of the organisation," Mr. Sullivan added.

According to Mr. Sullivan, prior to the impasse Pan Trinbago had enjoyed unity based on a common desire to sire to promote the steelband movement movement. This was the case for seven years before the present impasse developed.

He denied that the steelband body's dif-ficulties were the re-sult of the infiltration of certain political par-

'Pan Trinbago has never been aligned to any political party and members have the freedom to support whatdom to support wnat-ever organisation they choose. We have never had a problem in that area." he declared. Mr. Sullivan said it was also inaccurate to state that the impasse had been sparked off by financial problems since the status of the organisation in that area had always been good.

"The present executive has been in existence since 1978 and there have been only a few minor changes since then. They have never faced any real challenges for their leadership positions and this is part of the problem."

The former officials have suggested that structural changes in Pan Trinbago are needed so that the general membership eral membership will have more say in the running of their organ-isation. They have said that the impages that the impasse will not be resolved by fil-ling the posts in the executive that they have vacated. "What Pan Trinbago needs," said Mr. Sullivan, "is a commitment to a new mandate. Panmen should come for-ward and play a more active role in their association. They must give more of their tal-ent and experience."

SUNDAY MEETING

The former officials have said that a new mandate should help build a new unity among panmen based on a clear understanding of their past differences.

They are urging members of the steelband body to come out to the re-convened Special Convention which takes place on Sunday in Port-of-Spain to give support to a new man-

At present there are approximately 79 steelbands affiliated to Pan Trinbago with most member bands located in East Trinidad.
