

ABSTRACT

This research was done by first obtaining general knowledge in gendered involvement in poultry production from different parts of the world followed by the collection and gathering of information to determine the gendered involvement in medium scale broiler production in Arima and Talparo. Twenty five broiler farmers in these areas were sampled. After the data was collected and analyzed, the researcher found that women, men, boys and girls were all involved in broiler production but men dominated with respect to both ownership of farms and the provision of labour. Although division of labour existed the productivity of the farm was not affected.