

THE FESTIVAL OF BRITAIN: Here, in brilliant sunlight, crowds are wandering around the South Bank site, enjoying the many striking architectural features and the exhibitions within the many pavilions. Outlined in contrast to the County Hall and the Houses of Parliament behind it, is the mushroom-like Dome of Discovery, a great feat in engineering, and housing numerous intriguing exhibits. In the right of our picture is the front of the Festival Concert Hall, and centre, left, the Lion and Unicorn Pavilion, where British
