MESSAGE FROM HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR

SIR KENNETH BLACKBURNE, K.C.M.G., O.B.E.

This is the first occasion on which I have been privileged to send a message of welcome to a visiting team, and it is fitting that this first message should be for the game which we all recognise as our national game.

It is also the first occasion that the West Indies and Jamaica have had the pleasure of entertaining a cricket team from Pakistan. They come to us with a wonderful record, and we are greatly looking forward to seeing the attractive type of cricket which we know that they can offer.

We hope that they will enjoy their visit to what must be the most delightful place in the world in which to play or watch cricket. Whatever may be the outcome of the series, the good wishes of all of us are offered to them on their first visit to Jamaica.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT
R. K. NUNES, ESQ., C.B.E.

Many things happen in Jamaica in quick succession these days. A variety of visitors come to us for all forms of sport. Competition is welcomed. More often we are not conquerors on the field, but our opponents like us and do not forget our Island. We welcome Pakistan for the first time. They have expressed the desire to play in the friendliest spirit, which will fit in with our tradition. We wish our opponents to be in their best form. If they are, the West Indies, to defeat them, must improve considerably on their showing of the past three years in test matches. Pakistan's record in test cricket is worthy of deep respect. We played them one drawn match some years ago in their country. They are now more experienced and much stronger. They have several players with distinguished records. All Jamaica looks forward to the opportunity of meeting them and enjoying their quality.

R. K. Nunes

President, Jamaica Cricket Association.

JAMAICA'S FAVOURITE LAUNDRY SOAP

THE PAKISTANIS

Born at Lahore on Jan. 17, 1925. Played for the Punjab University in the Inter-varsity Cricket Tournaments with success. Made debut for Northern India in 1943-44 and came into prominence with the scores of 173, 161 not out and 86 not out against the Australian Services XI. He was a member of the Indian team that toured England in 1946 under the captaincy of the late Nawab of Pataudi. Played in the three Tests, scoring 43 in the first and 36 in the second. Later he went to Oxford, gained his "Blue" and helped the 1947-48 and 1949 University matches and also appeared for the "Gentlemen" at Lord's in the last season. Joined Warwickshire and gained his "County colours" in 1949.

In 1951, when the M.C.C. team came to Pakistan, Kardar was appointed captain, and led his country to victory in the second unofficial Test at Karachi. He also led Pakistan Team in India in 1952 and in all the five Tests in India, he totalled 173 runs (av. 34.60) and captured 6 wickets for 207 runs (av. 34.50). At Madras he hit up 79. Kardar also captained the Pakistan team that toured England in 1954 and proved his able leadership. He achieved victory over England in the 4th Test Match at the Oval. Also led Pakistan against India and New Zealand in Pakistan in 1955 with marked success.

Against the 1955-56 MCC "A" Team he played brilliantly at Dacca which enabled Pakistan to win the Second Test. Again at Peshawar he bowled well and captured 11 wickets in the two innings for 66 runs. The victory in the Third Test at Peshawar was mainly due to his fine bowling. In October 1956 he led Pakistan against Australians and showed his brilliant leadership by winning the only test played in Pakistan. In this test he scored 69. Kardar is a fine all rounder.

He is an Asst. Educational Adviser in the Ministry of Education, Govt. of Pakistan, Karachi. Married. (Son 5½).

A. H. KARDAR,
Captain

Born on July 27, 1918, at Hyderabad (West Pakistan). After matriculating from St. Patrick's High School, Karachi, he joined Aligarh Muslim University in 1936. He played first class cricket for 6 years for Aligarh throughout pre-partitioned India and Ceylon and captained the University Cricket XI in the years 1940, 1941 and 1942.

He also served the cricket cause very enthusiastically as Hony. Secretary of Karachi Cricket Association for the years 1954 and 1955 respectively. He was also Joint Secretary of the Board of Control for Cricket in Pakistan during this period and organized all Test and other matches at Karachi. He is the President of Bahawalpur Cricket Association.

Serving the Government of West Pakistan as Deputy Inspector General of Police. Married, has three children.

SAEED AHMED
KHAN, P.S.P., Manager

FAZAL MAHMOOD
Vice-Captain

In 1956 against the Australians in the only test played in Pakistan Fazal captured 13 wickets in two innings for 114 runs and was instrumental in keeping the Australian score so poor. Captained the Punjab Cricket Association in the Quid-i-Azam Trophy this year. In the summer of 1956, Fazal played league cricket in England as a Professional and did exceedingly well. Deputy Supt. of Police. Married (Son and daughter).

Born at Lahore February 18, 1927. Began to play cricket when only thirteen. As a student of the Islamia College he helped his team to score many victories in the Punjab University Cricket Tournament. Later, he played with marked success in the Inter-varsity and Zonal matches. On his form he was selected to tour Australia in 1947-48 but he declined the invitation because of his appointment in the police force.

In 1951 when the M.C.C. came to Pakistan, Fazal enabled Pakistan to register a great victory against the visitors in the second unofficial test at Karachi. He was an automatic choice when Pakistan toured India in 1952 and proved a great success. He won the Lucknow test for his country by his superb bowling. In the two innings he captured 12 wickets for 94 runs.

But his greatest achievement was in the fourth test at the Oval against England in 1954 when virtually all alone he defeated England by his brilliant bowling. In this thrilling test in both innings he took 13 wickets for 99 runs.

The chief quality of Fazal's bowling is a nagging accuracy and persistency. This quality may be judged from the fact that at slightly more than medium pace, he delivers the legbreaks mainly through cutting the ball. It is this delivery which obtains him most of his wickets. Apart from his bowling, Fazal is also a fearless and courageous batsman.

IMTIAZ AHMED
Wicket-Keeper

Born at Lahore on January 5, 1928. An attractive right-handed batsman, possessing a wide range of strokes and a very capable and sound wicket-keeper. He played in the Ranji Trophy in the year 1944-45 and has represented Pakistan regularly since partition. He was a member of the Pakistan team which toured India in 1952-53, scoring 592 runs including 203 not out against Central Zone at Nagpur. Playing against East Zone at Jamshedpur he scored a magnificent 103 (100 in 81 minutes) before lunch on the first day of the game.

His highest score is 300 not out scored for Prime Minister's XI against the Commonwealth team at Bombay in 1950-51. He stayed at the wicket for 490 minutes and hit 31 fours. In 1954 he visited England with the Pakistan team and his neat work behind the stumps won tremendous applause from the judges of the game.

In 1955 Imtiaz played in all the Tests against India and New Zealand. In the Second Test at Lahore against New Zealand he scored 209 runs, the highest ever by a Pakistani batsman in the tests. ## SHABASH ! (Well Done) PAKISTAN

by Vijay Merchant
(Former Indian captain and No. 1 Test batsman)

When on October 17, 1956, Pakistan, as in 1954 at The Oval against England, shocked the cricket world by beating the Australians at Karachi on a matting wicket in the only Test the two countries ever met, the famous Indian cricketer Vijay Merchant paid his neighbours this tribute in the Pakistan Sports & Pastimes, from which article excerpts have been taken:-

WHY do people have to find excuses for Australia's defeat by Pakistan? Surely it was known before the Australians came to this sub-continent that they would have a strenuous time in these countries playing 4 Test matches without any rest after a most strenuous wet season in England! Even the Australian Board was aware that while the last match of the Australian programme finished on the 15th of September, the First Test match at Karachi would be played on the 11th of October. Such enforced rest for nearly a month is bound to have its effect on the players but the Australian cricketers and the Board knew fully well about it and should have taken the necessary precautions against it. And the whole world knows that most of the Test matches in Pakistan are played on coir matting. So, why this hunting now for reasons for the Australian debacle?

To my mind the reason for the Pakistan victory is very simple. Pakistan has made great strides since its initial tour abroad (to India) in 1952. Pakistanis play much better cricket on matting than probably any other team in the world. They put in intensive training for over a fortnight in preparation for the big match. As against all this, the Australians of 1956 are one of the weakest teams Australia has fielded during the quarter of a century and their setbacks in England did not add either to the confidence or the morale of the players. The better team undoubtedly won.

What a wonderful record Pakistan has got in international cricket! It is a record of which any country may well be proud. Since the days South Africa entered the Test arena I do not think any country other than England and Australia has done so remarkably well in such a short period.

Pakistan won her initial victory against India in the very Second Test match in which she participated. She crowned a very fine tour in England with that glorious victory at the Oval in conditions most favourable to the English cricketers and particularly English spin bowlers. She confirmed her improvement by holding India to a draw in 5 Test matches in 1954-55 and last year defeated with a certain amount of ease both the New Zealand and the M.C.C. 'A' teams. As if all this was not enough to confirm that Pakistan has "arrived", she beat the "mighty" Australians! (Continued)

R. HANNA & SONS LTD.

In all departments of the game Pakistan proved superior. Her batting asserted itself against the Australian fast bowlers (who were expected to create a rout on coir matting) and her medium fast bowling got more out of the mat than the speedier Australian bowlers. The fielding was reported to be at least as good as that of the Australians. Abdul Hafeez Kardar certainly got more out of his men than Ian Johnson.

Within the first hour Pakistan had a grip on the game and like a good team she never lost hold of it right until the end of the match. It was a glorious victory in every sense of the term and although Pakistan has done something which India has yet to accomplish, it made us Indians feel both happy and proud of the achievements of this young side.

Abdul Hafeez Kardar has proved himself a truly admirable captain. We who have played with him and Fazal Mahmood are extremely proud of their achievements. I was very sorry when two years ago Kardar announced his retirement from Test cricket. Normally I do not believe in people coming out of their retirement but I was very happy that Kardar did so. Kardar's decision to get away from the game at such a young age and when he was indispensable to Pakistan cricket seemed to my mind a little hasty. But like a good sportsman he responded to the call of his country and came back to assist the side. I do hope that he will continue to play for at least another five years during which time Pakistan will add further laurels to those already won.

For Fazal Mahmood no praise is high enough. He has borne the brunt of the Pakistan attack on his broad shoulders and his length, direction, accuracy, pace off the wicket and the ability to cut the ball either way have helped him to become the foremost bowler of his type in the world.

With a galaxy of young cricketers that Pakistan now possesses, and more to come from the younger ones who are being so efficiently trained and sent for coaching to England, it is indeed a pity that Pakistan has not a more frequent exchange of visits with other Test countries. More Test matches against West Indies, England, Australia and India will bring Pakistan cricket very soon to its peak form and put her somewhere high-up in the Test table. Pakistan has put its own cricket house in order within a very short time, while we in this country after so many years of Test recognition are still groping in the dark. Pakistan's cricket and cricket organisation should be an object lesson to India. Shabash Pakistan. Good luck to you and more, more power to your elbow.

HERITAGE OF PAKISTAN CRICKET

By Jack Anderson

PAKISTAN'S cricket was born automatically in 1947 with the birth of the new nation within the Commonwealth. But in truth Pakistan's cricket enjoyed a similar heritage to that of India. As Pakistan came out of India so did her cricket, and so like India can lay claim to such illustrious sons as Ranji and Duleepsinhji before Test status went to the Eastern cricketers in 1932. Further proof is that their captain since they attained Test status in 1952 has been Kardar, who, as Abdul Hafeez, played for India in England in 1946.

Because of this current first tour of West Indies-Pakistan it is significant, too, that Pakistan's first international venture — meeting a team other than India — was against West Indies when we toured India and Pakistan in 1947-48.

The two first class matches played in Pakistan — vs Sind at Karachi and Pakistan (not a Test) at Lahore — are to be found elsewhere in this souvenir. Both matches were left drawn, but in between W.I. won a 2-day match by 9 wickets from the Commander-in-Chief's XI at Rawalpindi. One performance in this game was that George Headley took 6 for 49 in the second innings.

Pakistan is the 4th visiting country to play Test cricket in the West Indies — and providing us with our fifth Test series since the war.

The baby country of Test cricket first achieved that distinction in 1952-53, strangely not against England as has been tradition, but against India, who won the rubber 2-1. Their next encounter in 1954-55 in Pakistan, again against India ended in a stalemate.

Babes of Test cricket though they may be they boast unprecedented records. They are the only country to beat the fathers of Test cricket, England and Australia, when meeting them for the first time.

Pakistan first ventured into cricket's big test — a tour of England — in 1954. There were four Tests, and they shocked the cricket world by drawing the rubber by humbling the flower of English cricket at The Oval in the final Test.

In 1956 Australia returning home from England called at Pakistan and India for four Tests. Only one was played against the "Babes" and this they won on a matting wicket, a surface to which the Australians were unaccustomed, and against a somewhat jaded side having just completed the most arduous tour in the game — six months of English first class cricket. Still there was no gainsaying the significance of the victory.

India preceded their Eastern brothers four years ago to the W.I. and although losing the rubber, as was expected of them, did so only by the loss of one match. Their performance and standard of cricket, particularly in fielding, were on a whole more than worthy of opponents who were at that time accepted as second only to the Australians, who had beaten W.I. in 1951-52 for what undoubtedly was the world championship.

Before their tour of the W.I. the Pakistani cricketers in five years have played 18 Test matches against England, India and New Zealand, winning 5, losing 3 and drawing 10. Indeed an outstanding record that countries other than Australia and England first entering Test cricket cannot boast. Their widest margin in a rubber is 2-0 in a three-match series was against New Zealand in Pakistan in 1955-56.

WEST INDIES IN PAKISTAN 1948

THREE members of the Pakistan team now touring the West Indies were on the pioneer sides which initiated their country into first-class cricket after their separation from India in 1947.

The players, who met West Indian bowlers when we first toured India and Pakistan in 1948-49 now in the Caribbean are Imtiaz Ahmed, wicket-keeper batsman; Alim-ud-Din, opening batsman; and the vice-captain and probably the world's leading fast-medium bowler, Fazal Mahmood.

Two first class matches of the Pakistan section of the tour were played — both ending in draws. Alim had scores of 6 and 45 for Sind, but it was Imtiaz who took heavy toll of the visitors' attack, reflected in scores of 76 and 131. In the first innings he shared in an opening stand of 148 with Nazar Mahomed, and when WI led by 67 Imtiaz was mainly responsible for the consolidation of a fight-back second innings that placed his side beyond defeat by sharing a second wicket stand of 205 with Mahamed Saeed, who also hit a century.

Eight members of that Pakistan side that met West Indies at Lahore eventually helped to initiate their country into Test cricket against India in 1952 and England 1954.

From a West Indian point of view, the Lahore match saw the happy return of George Headley to the side following his breakdown and loss of form as a result of a then "mysterious" injury and which eventually was traced to be the result of a chipped rib. The rest of his illustrious career was to be affected by this.

Two other Jamaicans were outstanding — Ken Rickards being top-scorer for the tourists with 72 at Lahore, and Jimmy Cameron (4 for 52 vs Sind) returning his best performance in an innings of the tour.

Following are details of the two first class matches:—

W.I. TEST CRICKETERS 1928/57

By Jack Anderson

BEFORE the West Indies tour of England last year Everton Weekes (64.49) topped the West Indian batsmen in Test cricket, taking over from George Headley whose average at one time, or for most of his career, was second only to Sir Donald Bradman's.

Before the start of the current tour of the Pakistanis, following the poorest series in England experienced by the Three W's since 1951-52 in Australia, Headley had regained his old position as first West Indian Test batsman. But while he leads with an average of 60.83 he concedes the aggregate to all Three W's, headed by Weekes with exactly 4,000 runs.

This is natural because of the W's greater opportunities in modern Test cricket than Headley's by playing from 32 and 43 matches individually in 10 years to Headley's 22 in a career span of 24 years, including a war. Actually Headley is again second among Test batsmen in history, first being Bradman with his mammoth average of 99.94 and third is Herbert Sutcliffe at 60.73.

Greater opportunities also afforded Sonny Ramadhin and Alf Valentine to be the only West Indians to capture 100 wickets each among the bowlers, who are headed by fast bowler Mannie Martindale with an average of 21.72. Learie Constantine so far provides the only case of a West Indian scoring 500 runs and taking 50 wickets.

The following figures are the first completed statistics of their kind in West Indies Test cricket:—

W.I. IN ENGLAND 1957

(Excerpts from "The Cricketer Spring Annual")

by W. E. BOWES

(Former England, Yorkshire fast bowler)

WITHOUT any wish to be unkind there are two outstanding memories of the West Indies tour which deserve mention. The first was on the Saturday of the first Test match at Birmingham when England began their second innings 288 runs behind. The Moscow Dynamos, Real Madrid, indeed no football team in the world could possibly have taken the field with more show of enthusiasm than the West Indies. Once through the wicket gate leading to the ground they dispersed in all directions. The fieldsmen practised sprints. Fast bowler Gilchrist with knees lifting high galloped in a semicircle to the end from which he intended to bowl.

It was a menacing and warlike display and quite the reverse of the second memory, the scene in the last Test match at the Oval when West Indies returned to the pavilion after England had made a first innings score of 412. There was no bounce, bowlers were leaden-footed, and fieldsmen had tired from their efforts to keep the England score within bounds on a pitch already taking spin. West Indies had had it, and they knew they had had it.

They lost three of the five Test matches in under three days of cricket in each game. They drew the first Test at Birmingham and the third Test at Nottingham, but not without getting a considerable shock. Performances against the counties bore no resemblance to their showing against the full might of England. Not one county side managed to beat them and considering the luck of the toss and rain, this in itself was a tremendous achievement. Against Surrey, and the full might of the Champions' bowling, they scored 270 for 3 wickets in the second innings to bring off a sensational victory. They were a good side . . . especially in the batting and fielding departments.

Worrell, a magnificent team man, was the only player of the famous "Three W's" to produce anything like his form of the 1950 tour, nevertheless, the West Indies had seven batsmen who scored their 1,000 runs, and if one can venture an opinion about anything so unpredictable as cricket form, it seems that the West Indies have, in 21-year-old Garfield Sobers, a left-hand batsman of real class.

BETTER FITTED

England, with the fast bowlers Bailey, Statham and Trueman, were much better fitted to exploit the help (at Lord's) than were Worrell and Gilchrist for West Indies. At Leeds in the fourth Test the England bowlers found a "greentop" and then in the fifth and final game at the Oval there was a playing surface likened, without much exaggeration, to Blackpool Sands!

But let me put this mention of pitches in perspective. There is no complaint about a surface which enables the bowler to use his skill to the discomfort of the batsman. Trueman and Loader bowled magnificently at Leeds, and when Lock and Laker are in full cry at The Oval, I wonder if a World XI would not look like rabbits. Such has been the strength of the England bowling over the past few years that on any pitch, which contained help in equal measure — for the skill of the bowler — they started favourites.

Nevertheless, looking at the tour as a whole, the seeds of the West Indies defeat were sown in that first Test match at Birmingham when on a surface as perfect as any to be found in their own islands they allowed their stranglehold to slip. Almost, it could be said, they nurtured the seeds of their own defeat.

Cricketers generally love to see cricket which is a struggle between bat and ball but I wonder if, as with the Australians, the West Indies did not see too much of struggle.

PREVIOUS TESTS PLAYED AT SABINA PARK

TEST cricket came to the West Indies in 1929-30 with the tour of the late Hon. F. S. G. Calthorpe's MCC team. Four Tests were played on that tour and also in 1934-35 and 1947-48, so that one match on each tour was played in each colony up to that winter.

The Indians in 1952-53 brought five-Test series to the West Indies, and this was so in subsequent tours of 1953-54 by MCC and Australia in 1955. Jamaica enjoyed the distinction of having two Tests at Sabina Park against England and the Australians; and before the current tour of the Pakistanis the honour of two matches in a series was first played in Trinidad.

To date eight Tests have been played at Sabina Park with West Indies winning three (all against England) and losing three (two to Australia), and two were left drawn (one to the Indians).

As in the case of the Indian tour in 1952-53 the Pakistanis will provide the only other instance of the last Test of a series in the West Indies not being played in Jamaica. In 1935, 1948 and 1954 the rubber was decided at Sabina Park, England in the latter year accomplishing the unexpected to win the match and drew the rubber after losing the first two Tests (starting with the first at Sabina Park) of the series.

Sabina has also another distinction — the second longest Test in history. That of 1930 which was abandoned after 9 days' play!

SOME CURRENT W.I. TEST PLAYERS

FRANZ COPELAND MURRAY ALEXANDER

Born November 2, 1928. Government veterinary doctor. Currently West Indies captain—first Jamaican to hold position since George Headley in 1948—Gerry Alexander will be Jamaica's 19th captain down the years since the visit of the Philadelphians in 1887-8. He is one of Jamaica's natural ball players, coming on the international scene at a comparatively early age. He led Jamaica at football vs. Trinidad when 20, then going on to Cambridge University on a scholarship he gained both cricket and soccer Blues 1952-53. He was then considered as probably the best amateur wicket-keeper in England, and played in the soccer Amateur Cup Final at Wembley for Pegasus in 1952-3 and England Amateur Caps at full back. He hit 99 for the Cantabs vs. Notts in 1952, sharing a record 5th wicket stand of 220 with R. Subba Row, and when he toured England last season hit 83 vs. Leicestershire. He never played cricket for Jamaica until he was selected for that tour, keeping in all three matches against the Duke of Norfolk's team last year February.

EVERTON DeCOURCY WEEKES

Born at Bridgetown, Barbados, February 26, 1925. Regarded the most devastating run-getter since Sir Donald Bradman, the smallest of the three famous Barbadian-born Three W's, even more than Walcott also experienced a great reversal of form in England last year. At least he had his worst Test series since he startled the world between 1948-49 with the record of five successive Test centuries—141 vs. England at Sabina Park, 128 at New Delhi, 194 at Bombay and 162 and 101 at Calcutta vs. India. His sixth Test innings was 90 run out at Madras! And the England reversal, due it is said to sinus trouble, should also come so soon after five successive centuries (three in Tests) in first-class matches of his New Zealand tour of 1956. His 940 (av. 104.44) is a NZ record.

Other tour records: 1947-48 in India, 1,350, av. 90; 1950 in England, 2,310, av. 79.65 (first for English season), 1951-52 in Australia-NZ (handicapped by a strained back), 557, av. 27.85; 1957 in England, 1,096, av. 28.10. During the Indian tour in the Caribbean in 1952-53 he set a record for a West Indian by scoring 969, av. 121.12. Besides being the only West Indian to aggregate 4,000 runs in Tests, he like the other Two W's, has scored over 10,000 runs in first-class cricket—10,385, av. 60.37, and hit 34 centuries before the start of the current tour. His 197 in the first Test against Pakistan was his 15th century—a West Indian record. Highest score of his career—304 not out vs. Cambridge U. in 1950.

GARFIELD SOBERS

Born at Bridgetown, Barbados, on July 28, 1936, along with Jamaica's Collie Smith and British Guiana's Rohan Kanhai might provide the answers to the fast coming vacancies to be left by the Three W's in West Indies Test XI.

"It seems that the West Indies have in 21-year-old Sobers a left-hand batsman of real class," predicts former England fast bowler Bill Bowes in The Cricketer Annual 1957-58. Sobers up to the first Test in Barbados against Pakistan has yet to score a century in 15 Test matches, starting against England in 1954 at Sabina Park. But in England last year he made most runs in first-class matches for the West Indies team—1,644, averaging 43.26, to finish only behind Frank Worrell and Clyde Walcott. He hit three centuries, including the highest for his side—219 not out vs. Nottinghamshire at Nottingham. Before the opening of the Pakistan tour Sobers had in first-class cricket aggregated 2,601 runs averaging 41.95, and hit four centuries.

And to enhance his all-round ability captured with his left-hand slow bowling 72 wickets at just over 31 runs each.

CLYDE LEOPOLD WALCOTT

Born at Bridgetown, Barbados, January 17, 1926. Like Worrell to Jamaica (from 1947) has migrated to BG (from 1954). Lost stature as probably the world's best right-hand batsman of the day during the tour of England last year following an injury to his thigh on falling when taking a run in the first Test at Birmingham. Walcott up to then, scoring 90 in that Test and 627 averaging nearly 70 in first-class matches, gave all indication of maintaining the reputation that made him the leading Test run-getter in the world in two straight Test series 1954-55, and creating two unprecedented records. Two separate centuries in a Test match twice and five centuries, all in the same Test rubber—vs. Australia 1955.

He was vice-captain last year in England, which he was touring for the second time. Here are his tour records: 1948-49 in India and Pakistan, 1,366 runs, av. 75.88; 1950 in England, 1,674, av. 55.8; 1951-52 in Australia and New Zealand, 1,098, av. 49.9; and 1957 in England, 1,414, av. 46.61. Holds the highest aggregate in a rubber for a West Indian—829, av. 82.7 vs. Australia in 1955. Walcott first made a name for West Indies as wicket-keeper-batsman until lumbago threatened during the Australian tour in 1952 and he gave up the 'keeping. He played Lancashire League cricket from 1951-54. In all first-class matches he has aggregated 10,364 runs, av. 57.57 and hit 35 centuries. (Continued)

ROHAN KANHAI

Born at Berbice, British Guiana, on December 26, 1935. Hitting three centuries (including 117 in the non-first-class Trials in Port-of-Spain due to the substituting of players during the matches) in six innings, following an innings of 51 on his first-class debut against Australia in 1955, the East Indian left The West Indies last year as probably the most potential young batsman, as Sobers and Smith were viewed in the light of all-rounders. He was, however, slow in finding his form in the early matches of the tour, yet was surprisingly pressed into the onerous job of keeping wicket in cricket's biggest match—a Test, before gaining confidence as a batsman. These probably have to this day retarded his progress! He kept wicket for three straight Tests and then was further pressured into becoming an opening batsman, and now persisted with during the current Pakistan tour. However, he is young enough and apparently possessing the latent talent that will surmount these early setbacks. In England he aggregated over 1,000 runs and in first-class matches before the start of the Pakistan tour hit 1,513 runs averaging 36.90 with a top score of 195 run out vs. Barbados in the Quadrangular Tournament in British Guiana in 1956.

ROY GILCHRIST

Born June 28, 1934. Will play professional cricket in England this year. A stockily-built fast bowler, who at times is likely to sacrifice accuracy for speed — which made about the fastest in England last year — Gilchrist has made considerable headway as a first-class cricketer. He made his debut only in 1956 in Senior Cup and the same season he was representing Jamaica Colts in two matches in Antigua, was back in Georgetown in 1957 for the first Quadrangular Tournament, and then to Trinidad for the Trials in January last year. His success was moderate, but there was enough potentiality to send him to England. Like most visiting pace-bowlers to England his length tended to be short and his 37 wickets cost as many as 31.78 each; but how devastating he can be on the hardest wicket was demonstrated in the first Test against Pakistan on this tour when he returned first-innings analysis of 14-4-34-4.

TOM DEWDNEY

Born October 23, 1933. Tall fast bowler-clerk who got his opportunity to play for WI when Frank King broke down for the fourth and fifth Tests against Australia. His debut was impressive, helping to carry the attack in face of heavy onslaught as gauged from a total of 668, but returning an analysis of 33-5-124-4 at Bridgetown. He was then playing only his second match in first-class cricket. In NZ he showed improvement, bowling with courage and some success, taking 20 wickets at 17.5 each, his best performance being 19.5-11-21-5 in the first innings of the fourth Test at Auckland.

He, however, did not live up to expectations in England last year when his greater experience and ability to move the ball through the air would be the assets that would make him the best of the trio of fast bowlers on the West Indies side. He once took 5 wickets in an innings, played in only the last Test, and in all first-class matches took 36 wickets at 27.05 runs each.

O'NEIL GORDON SMITH

Born May 5, 1934. Will play professional cricket in U.K. this year. Better known as Collie Smith, he is probably the most potential young all-round cricketer in the West Indies today. Made his debut against Trinidad in February 1955 at home when he revealed his excellent temperament by scoring 58 in 57 minutes, including three vicious 6's — one of them the winning stroke — in the second match at Melbourne Park. This was a marked contrast to a defensive innings of 32 after Jamaica was 71 for 5 in the first innings. Went on to gain international prestige by scoring 169, sharing in the stand of 277 for the sixth wicket with Allie Binns; and hitting 104 in his first Test match at Sabina Park against Australia later that same year. Toured N.Z. in 1956 with the West Indies and England last year.

In England Collie proved the crowd-pleaser; going in more often than not at No. 6 and lower, he was required to make runs quickly, and that he intended that that should be the tempo of his batting is reflected in the fact that his first scoring stroke in England was for a 6 in the Worcestershire match. He showed, too, adaptability by playing two match-saving innings in the Test matches — 161 at Birmingham (first) and 168 at Nottingham (third). These were generally responsible for his heading the Tests batting averages and in first-class matches aggregated 1,483 averaging 41.19 — finishing fourth. He also took 34 wickets.

ALLAN F. RAE

ALFRED LEWIS VALENTINE

Born April 28, 1930. Professional cricketer. In the last two years has undoubtedly lost form and no doubt skill which at one time placed him No. 1 among left-hand slow bowlers of his day. The devastating right-hand-left-hand combination between him and Sonny Ramadhin almost helped to place West Indies on top of the world in Test cricket, but since 1954 they as a team had lost much of their effectiveness. Valentine played in only two Tests and bowled only 28 overs for 88 runs in England last year, but after he got over a bad bowling finger and regained some of his confidence he was second only to Ram in the first-class bowling figures with 60 wickets at 19.66 each. Previous on going to England he was West Indies' leading Test bowler with 120 wickets, which position he has now yielded to friend Ram with 127 wickets.

ALLAN FITZROY RAE

Born September 30, 1922. Left-hand batsman, he has been captain of Jamaica since he first visited BG in 1952 until last year against the Duke of Norfolk's Team. A solicitor, he is the son of a former West Indies cricketer. Toured India 1948-49, England 1950 and Australia-New Zealand 1951-52, when for the most part enjoyed much success as a technically sound left-hand opening batsman. Made his first-class debut against Barbados in Jamaica in 1947 scoring 111 and 128 in the second match at Sabina Park, still a W.I. inter-colonial record. In 1952 in BG scored 103 in the first match, leading Jamaica to a 1-0 win. With Jeff Stollmeyer, holds the opening partnership for WI Test cricket — 239 vs. India at Madras, 1948-49, and for WI on tour in first-class cricket — 355 vs. Sussex at Hove in 1950, in which total he hit his highest score yet — 179.

KEN RICKARDS

Born August 23, 1923. SMA cricket coach, and for many seasons played as a professional league cricketer in Lancashire. A fine right-hand stroke player, who was good enough to be a member of West Indies first post-war team to go overseas — that which toured India and Pakistan 1948-49, and against Pakistan, Rickards hit 72. But he seems to have been born in the wrong era, that in which the Three W's as the chief middle batsmen and Stollmeyer and Rae opening props of West Indies Test XI. His chances, therefore, of representing WI have been limited. His best Test innings is 67 against England in 1948 at Sabina Park. He last represented Jamaica against the MCC in 1954, getting 75 in his first innings, then suddenly went off form. His best innings is 195 vs. BG at Sabina Park in 1951.

JOHN KENNETH HOLT, JNR.

Born August 12, 1923. Sugar Board cricket coach-designate, he is the son of a cricketer who represented the West Indies. A natural cricketer and above all a very attractive right-hand batsman when in form, he has had a chequered career. First played for Jamaica against Trinidad in 1946 and got to 94 in his first innings when the side needed runs. Incidentally, it was at that figure that he was halted on the same ground (Sabina Park) eight years later when he played his first Test for WI vs. England, and which proved the arbiter of his best season yet — 662 runs, including 166 in the second Test and 152 for Jamaica, averaging 55.16, off the MCC bowlers that tour. Played some innings of promise, particularly 31 and 60 in the first Test against Australia, but always got out just when he seemed set. There are few better players of the new ball than Holt today. Played three years in Lancashire League cricket and in 1949-50 toured India with the Commonwealth Team. In first-class cricket has aggregated 2,442 runs, averaging 40.03 with 172 the highest of four three-figure innings, made against BG in 1947 when he first visited that country.

Came back into his own last year when he was about the best batsman on either side, for stroke production in the Jamaica-Duke of Norfolk Tournament, heading the batting with 316 runs averaging 79 with the aid of a topscore of 93 not out.

FRANK WORRELL

EASTON McMORRIS

Born April 4, 1935. Right-hand opening batsman whom the experts think will fill that position for the West Indies in the near future. A one-time over-cautious batsman, correct in style, he has developed strokes since first representing Jamaica Colts in Antigua in August 1956. In his only innings in the Quadrangular Tournament against BG in October of that year he got 34, and last February against the Duke of Norfolk's team hit 114 in the first Colony match at Sabina Park. He aggregated 247 averaging 41.66 in the three matches and in April his half-century for Jamaica in the farewell one-day match against West Indies was a revelation of how much he had come on.

FIRST LINE OF JAMAICAN PLAYERS

C. S. MORRISON

J. K. HOLT Sr.

NLY since the last war, with the coming of the Three W's and other batsmen of the calibre of J. B. Stollmeyer and Gerry Gomez, have other West Indian batsmen compared with Jamaica players in the compiling of first-class three-figure innings against visiting English, Australian and Indian teams.

Actually, the first century to be made for Jamaica was 121 not out by an Englishman, Captain (later Major) T. B. Nicholson, against S. C. Snow's Team from the other colonies in 1910.

F. R. Martin, the stolid left-hander, was the first native-born to achieve the feat, when he got 195 run out against Barbados, in 1925, at Kensington Oval. First century by a native-born at home was 140 not out by another left-hander, R. K. Nunes, Jamaica's greatest captain, against the MCC in 1926.

Martin and Nunes, Jamaica's two great left-handers, were the first West Indian batsmen too to score double centuries against visitors to the Caribbean — doing so in the same tour against Hon. Lionel (later Lord) Tennyson's Team in 1927. Nunes did so in the first match with 200 not out, and Martin beat that record for the then highest Jamaican individual innings (a feat probably denied him two years before when he was run out in Barbados) with 204 not out in the third and final match of the 1927 tournament.

George Headley, of course, now holds the highest individual score for both a Jamaican and a West Indian against an English team or any first-class match with 344 not out in 1932, when he also had innings of 84, 155 not out and 140 in consecutive innings against Lord Tennyson's Team. J. K. Holt Sr. first played for Jamaica back in 1904 and scored the four first-class centuries of his career in two succeeding tours while in his 40's! Ken Weekes made a century on his first appearance in a big match — against the Universities in 1938.

Test matches have never been played at Melbourne Park but the ground has proven a "happy-hunting" one for Jamaica batsmen for century-making, starting off with Nunes' 140* in 1926. Headley, too, hit the first of his 33 there with 211 in 1928. His highest of 344* was also made at Melbourne, where 20 of the 38 three-figure innings recorded for Jamaica to date against teams outside of The West Indies were made.

Tantalising leg-break bowler Tommy Scott, who in pre-war days was as popular with the ball as J. K. Holt Sr. and George Headley, after, with the bat, was the first native Jamaican to capture 200 first-class wickets. Of course, Alfred Valentine, with far more post-war opportunities, has gone ahead with 362 wickets.

Adopted son Frank Worrell has also taken over 200 wickets, but while our John Cameron, son of a former West Indies player, got nearly 200 they were mostly taken for Cambridge University and Somerset. In fact Cameron has only played one match for Jamaica — vs. Trinidad in 1946 when he scored no run and took 4 wickets.

Both Vin Lumsden and present Jamaica and West Indies captain Gerry Alexander also scored most of their runs for Cambridge.

“Corinthians and Casuals”

The voices of history gather. And the appeal of history is imaginative. Imagination craves to behold the past. Consider all that is implicit in that single word “past”, the more so when we find its wings folded around two such names as the Corinthian Football Club and The Casuals Football Club. To write of one with a full justice would be difficult enough: to embrace the two together with equal grace and judgment needs the wisdom of a Solomon and the pen of a C. B. Fry, now, alas ! departed to Olympus whence he came.

The Corinthians and The Casuals, now searching out the mid-twentieth century in hyphenated partnership, stand in their 75th year. Circumstance has decreed that their hour be now the same. Indeed, in a sense there seems to be justice in that, for though each was, and is, separate, they are at once the same, springing from a common stem with common ideals: they are twins.

Yet even twins must provide a senior. In Anglo-Saxon law it is the first born: in the Gallic interpretation it is the last born, since he is considered to have been conceived first. Yet here it is not the cold letter of the law but a warm, popular sentiment and the clashing cymbals of history that make their undisputed choice. The past declares Corinth primus inter pares. Each Casual will accept that declaration like a brother and applaud, the more so now that this matchless ideal stands in the purple dignity of its present shadow. And so, applauding, we turn back to that past that we may

THE Corinthian Football Club was founded in 1882 and on October 26 of that year played their first match. The Casuals Football Club saw the first light of day in April, 1883. Thus, only a handful of months separated them, but though they both sprang from the common limbs of the Public Schools and Universities, the reasons for their birth were different. The Corinthians were formed by N. L. ("Pa") Jackson, assistant honorary Secretary of The Football Association at that time, as a counter to an unbroken string of Scottish successes in the international field. Jackson felt that by skimming the cream of the best amateur talent in England and by forming them into a team that could understand each other's method by constant practice lay the answer to Scottish dominion.

The Casuals, too, were formed from Old Boys and University men. But the reasons, it would appear, varied. Unkind suggestions of the past pointed to this new formation as the residue left after the Corinthian cream had been gathered in. Best perhaps would be to quote from the privately circulated publication produced on the occasion of The Casuals F.C. Jubilee Banquet in 1933 :—

"Back in the early 'eighties Public School old boys whiled away the journeys to their football games much as they do to-day—nap was the popular gamble. Anyhow, some of them left too much money behind one Saturday and decided to have their own football club, and so keep their money in the family. This new club was The Casuals, and membership was confined in the first place to old boys of Charterhouse, Eton, and Westminster. Later, membership was thrown open to all old Public School and University players."

Thus arose the other branch from the common stem. But note the differences. First, "Pa" Jackson had founded the Corinthians with a set target and the famous name had sprung from H. A. Swepstone after such titles as "The Wednesday" had been bandied about because the players, already members of other clubs, could only meet in mid-week. Next, amongst the club's rules adopted, were two of much significance across the years—"that the number of members be limited to 50, exclusive of life members, and that there be no entry fee nor subscription"; "that the club shall not compete for any challenge cup or any prizes of any description whatever." Here, in fact, was fashioned at a single stroke the most exclusive club in any field game in history, to which entry was by invitation only, a club which put the game itself and its moral code above all else. In the mid-twentieth century that may seem quixotic. But upon that was founded the glory of Corinth.

It is true that the Corinthians in later years amended their Constitution to enter for the Sheriff of London's Shield—for the purposes of supporting Charity purely—and in the nineteen twenties to enter the F.A. Cup Competition. They did so only in the face of changing circumstance. But there were those at the time (and there are those now) who thought their incursion into the fiery business of the Cup a mistake. Yet there are always two sides to every question and it is probably true to say that the Corinthians made far more lifelong friends than they lost in spite of their thin material success on the road to Wembley.

From the start The Casuals performed a different function. They set out, not to attack some lofty Everest, but merely to provide the spirit of fun and play and camaraderie as an extension of school and University life. T. W. Blenkiron, a Cambridge Blue and Old Carthusian, and F. Bickley, an Old Etonian, were the founders, and the first member they elected was W. G.

Morrison, for many years captain of Reigate Priory Football Club. Other members elected at the beginning were mostly friends of the founders, but the widening of the qualifying rule for admission to the Club duly led to many well known players joining their ranks. Thus the Casuals shirt soon made its mark in its distinctive colours of chocolate and pink—the racing silks of F. Bickley, one of the co-founders.

But whatever the hues, the fact was that the crested white shirt of Corinth and the chocolate and pink of The Casuals soon held hands in a close understanding. And why not? Their roots were the same, so much so that one became the stepping stone to the other, by invitation. The Casuals, as the years revealed in their course, became the chief nursery, the forcing ground, of the Corinthians so that the players largely became interchangeable, common, the one to the other.

Nothing could make this more clear than to extract another item from The Casuals Jubilee Publication of 1933. In it two prominent officials were asked to name, independently, their best Casuals XI between the period 1883 to 1903. Their selections were as follows :—

W. Campbell ; L. V. Lodge, W. J. Oakley ; B. Middleditch, R. R. Barker, H. Roper Barrett ; R. Topham, A. N. Guy, H. J. Collier, C. L. Alexander, C. J. Burnup.

G. B. Raikes ; L. V. Lodge, W. J. Oakley ; B. Middleditch, M. M. Morgan-Owen, H. Vickers ; G. C. Vassall, S. H. Day, G. O. Smith, J. G. Veitch, M. H. Stanborough.

Of those two teams Raikes, Lodge, Oakley, Middleditch, Barker, Morgan-Owen, Topham, Burnup, Day, Smith, Veitch and Stanborough were full internationals. But this is the point. Every man of the two teams named was also a Corinthian, as will be shown by a little recourse to that excellent volume "A History of the Corinthian Football Club ", a work of love if ever there was one by F. N. S. Creek, himself a famous Corinthian of the nineteen twenties.

So the point, we hope, is made. The Corinthians and The Casuals were at once separate yet single. The name of Corinth won a place of affection and renown and became a symbol of fair play perhaps untouched by any other within the English game. Their glory and achievement was the measure of the satisfaction felt by The Casuals, their brothers, and only those who live in a myopic world would say otherwise.

Here were two great forces for good within the amateur game. In the fullness of time each club widened its net considerably from the narrow arc of its beginning. This, in fact, was merely the quiet process of democratisation that fell into step with the changing social pattern of the twentieth century. Though the old established, historic Universities beside Cam and Isis had largely been the recruiting ground of each, this was no longer completely true by the time of the first world war. The range was widened.

Yet basically, throughout each of their active lives, the Corinthians and The Casuals rode—have ridden—as it were, on a tricycle. Of the three points of contact the rear wheels—the driving wheels—represented the Schools and the Universities. The leading wheel was the wonderful missionary work undertaken by tours to various parts of the world.

Almost from the start the annual fixtures against Oxford and Cambridge became common denominators to both Clubs; so, too, did the visits to Charterhouse, Shrewsbury, Repton, Malvern, Westminster, Highgate, Winchester, Bradfield, Aldenham, Forest, and so on. How many budding young footballers were inspired in their early years by such visits, and how many later grew to wear either the chocolate and pink or the crested white shirts of their earlier heroes is a subject some ferret of a historian might nose out one day. Suffice it to say, almost in parenthesis, and almost in shame, that the effect on one young man—a newcomer to his School XI—was all but disastrous. Finding himself face to face and actually on the same pitch with those famous white shirts with great names INSIDE them, he merely stood around in a trance all one afternoon, as if mesmerized by the skill he had so often read about. That was not the object of the exercise at all and the games master let him know it in no uncertain fashion later. But it showed the influence on an impressionable young mind.

As for oversea tours, The Casuals in their time have visited almost every corner of Europe ; once they went to Jamaica, and to Madeira, and only a few seasons ago broke exciting new territory with an air trip to Libya. Looking once again at their Jubilee Publication of 25 years ago one notices a group photograph of a visit to Spain where on January 6, 1923, the Club held Bilbao F.C. to a 4—4 draw ; the same Bilbao that only two seasons ago won the Spanish League Championship and a year ago lost on an aggregate of 6 goals to 5 to Manchester United in two thunderingly exciting ties in the European Cup. Time marches on ! Those who bemoan the fact that the Continentals have now surpassed us in the skills of the game can largely thank or blame (whichever you wish !) the Corinthians for that. There is little question, indeed, but that it was their missionary work abroad that first awoke the foreigner to the true arts of football. The Corinthians went, they sparkled, and they conquered—imagination and hearts.

Consider the list of overseas tours undertaken by them, here collated from F. N. S. Creek's "History of the Corinthians" : South Africa 1897, 1903 and 1907 ; Hungary 1904 ; Scandinavia 1904 ; Germany and Holland 1906 ; Canada and United States 1906, 1911, 1924 ; France 1908, 1921, 1929 ; Prague 1909, 1912 ; Brazil 1910, 1913 and 1914 (recalled without a match played because of war) ; Spain 1911 ; Denmark and Holland 1922 ; Belgium and Holland 1923 ; Germany and Austria 1925 ; Denmark and Germany 1928 ; Switzerland 1930 and 1931.

Many of the countries listed were merely in the kindergarten stage when Corinth descended upon them with football, text book, and code of behaviour. They helped to water the flower of football artistry which is so much a part of the continental and South American—certainly of the Central European peoples. That many of the nations did not fully imbibe the code of ethics was shown when the heat was on in after years. But of their playing skills and of their fount of inspiration there could be little question. After all, four of them in the last 25 years have reached the final of the World Cup—Hungary (the losers of 1938 and 1954) ; Czechoslovakia (the losers of 1934) ; Brazil (the losers of 1950) ; and Germany, the World Champions of 1954, who will be defending their title in Sweden this June. So much for the early handiwork of the Corinthians and The Casuals in spreading the game.

Nor is it forgotten by some who once were the pupils. A few years ago—after the Second World War—an elderly Czech who had once upon a time played for his country, turned his thoughts and his conversation to the old days. He recalled a Corinthian visit to Prague. It seemed to have made an indelible impression on his mind.

“ I remember ”, he said, “ how they walked on to the field, spotless in their white shirts and dark shorts. Their hands were in their pockets, their sleeves hanging down. There was about them an air of casual grandeur, a haughtiness that was yet not haughty ; an indefinable something. And how they played ! ”

Sharply he dragged himself back from the mists of the past to ask : “ Where are their counterparts now ? Where are the pure amateurs who could look like those giants, play like those giants, and breathe the same quality ? ” A few seasons later perhaps one might have been able to give part of the answer : in the Corinthian-Casuals themselves, the present guardians of an ancient tradition, as they fought superbly at Wembley to hold the northern power of Bishop Auckland at bay in the F.A. Amateur Cup Final ; or in Pegasus as they regained a place in the Sun for University football at this same Wembley before 100,000 people to win the Amateur trophy. But at the time his question had no real reply beyond : “ Where are the top-hats of yesterday ; the stately horse and carriage ; the Sunday Morning parade in Hyde Park ? Things are changed, that’s all . . . ! ”

The histories of families are often built around their homes. The Corinthians and The Casuals are no exceptions to this. Nor, remembering how closely interwoven have been the threads of their lives, need there be surprise that on more than one occasion have they shared the same ground, or followed one another to it. Tracing this particular pattern, indeed, brings the curious feeling of being on a roundabout.

The Corinthian “ homes ” began at the Oval in 1885 (with an admission of 6d.). They spread to Queen’s Club, to Richmond, and then occasionally to the ground of the Essex County Cricket Club at Leyton ; next, briefly, to the Crystal Palace and to Tufnell Park. But, in effect, by 1895 Queen’s Club had become their true habitat. There most of the stirring Corinthian matches were held until the first war, following which the Old Crystal Palace ground, of happy Cup Final memory, was restored to use. And it was there that Corinth saw out the fading years of their life up till 1938.

Now consider The Casuals’ homes. The similarity is not without significance. Tufnell Park and Leyton housed them in the main from their early beginnings until 1914. In 1922-23 they moved into the Crystal Palace briefly with the Corinthians until the year 1925 saw the Club transfer to Kingston as tenants of the Kingstonian F.C. It was a happy arrangement that brought success, a sense of security, and many new supporters until a second world war again put out the lights of Europe.

Since then life has been difficult. But under the joint title of Corinthian-Casuals they have turned back the wheel of history. In 1950 they reached agreement with the Surrey County Cricket Club for the use of the Oval from October to February inclusive, of every year; famous Kennington, the first home of Corinth and the F.A. Cup Final which had not seen a football match since 9th March, 1895, when the Corinthians beat their old enemy Queen's Park, of Glasgow, by 4—0. And as if to give the wheel of time one final twist, only this season the Corinthian-Casuals have appeared again at the Crystal Palace ground of old, filling in the rest of the Season.

So the ancient echoes are raised. They are raised not by the joint title of Corinthian-Casuals, a partnership that holds the past and the future in trust. They are raised by each in his own right, each sounding his horn from the mountain range of the years.

There comes the rounded note of The Casuals playing and beating Woolwich Arsenal by 5 goals to 3 at Tufnell Park before 7,000 spectators in the long ago when many of the well-known professional clubs were met in a less highly organized era of the game. The Casuals heroes that day, so history relates, were :— A. E. Harrison ; S. L. King, N. P. Landale ; C. P. Wilson, R. R. Barker, H. Vickers ; A. N. Guy, W. P. Toone, G. P. Wilson, C. J. Burnup, and C. L. Alexander. But by comparison that must remain a modest note. For who dare stand and talk while Corinth speaks ?

It is easy enough to take scissors and paste and create a patchwork of achievement from the years, What is far more difficult is to interpret the past and harness it to the present. Is it, indeed, possible to create an equation between one half century and another without confusing liberty with licence? Not entirely : but by applying the principles of play as set down by a Corinthian generation it is perhaps possible to bridge the years and so fashion something anew with an equal dignity.

At any rate, those scissors and that paste, directed by a selective mind, can offer joyful reading. What a wide range of choice there is, what homeric tales to recount : some apocryphal perhaps, some not. Do they grow the dimmer for repetition, any more than Christmas itself? The story, for instance, of the Corinthians on one of their annual New Year visits to Glasgow to play their old friend and enemy Queen's Park, the father and mother of Scottish football. The Scots that particular day had a certain Dr. Paul playing at outside left and it was his single goal that finally won them the match. Whereupon a Scottish evening newspaper flooded the Glasgow streets that night with the poster : " Paul's message to the Corinthians ".

But, fundamentally, it was the Corinthians themselves who had a message to offer the world from the beginning. They were formed, as has been said, in an effort to end Scotland's run of success on the international field. Soon N. L. Jackson and his men had achieved that end. But first, as early as December 1884, they arrived like some new comet in the sky by overwhelming Blackburn Rovers, holders of the F.A. Cup at the time and then considered unbeatable, to the staggering tune of eight goals to one, and that in the very heart of Lancashire.

In 1886 the full England team to face Scotland was composed of nine Corinthians and two members of Blackburn Rovers ; twice Corinth as a whole took the field in England shirts—in 1894 when eleven Corinthians beat Wales at Wrexham by 5—1, and in 1895 when they drew with Wales 1—1 at Queen's Club. So, almost in the bat of an eyelid, "Pa" Jackson's particular dream came true. Yet even he was outstripped in imagination.

The Corinthians, in fact, far overstepped the original limited aim of authority on the football field. By performance and by their code of behaviour they became a symbol within the game, a monument to moral standards as first displayed by the small but powerful universe of ancient Hellas. The Olympic and Isthmian Games of old found a nineteenth century echo, and it was perhaps more than a touch of fate that that echo should ring from such a name as Corinth. But whatever the happy choice it is a name that lives on to this day when even the changing values of a shifting, restless world cannot smudge its purity or change its meaning.

Once upon a time it was the ambition of every small boy first to be a Corinthian, and next an engine driver. At a certain preparatory school some 30 years ago it was the custom of the headmaster towards the end of the Christmas term to choose his special Corinthian XI versus the Rest. To be in the School team was no certain passport to this very special XI. In fact, the blackest words that could fall from the headmaster's lips upon any mal-doer in the life of the school were : "If you can't BEHAVE you can't expect to play for my Corinthians, no matter how smart you are with the ball." Nothing later has ever achieved quite the same hell on earth as those words.

When a man reaches the venerable age of 75 years it is the time of night to turn his mind back across the years ; over the restful influence of a glass of port and a cigar he may quietly count his past triumphs and measure his mistakes, for none is perfect. The Corinthians and The Casuals, as brothers in arms, have so much to share. Let each in his turn remember. The dust of many a past battle is now settled, but which especial one to savour ?

Would it be, for instance, that day at the Crystal Palace, November 8, 1899, when the Corinthians first won the Sheriff of London Shield by beating the full might of Aston Villa (barring the injured Crabtree) by two goals to one? It was a match G. O. Smith himself remembered especially from all his encounters and well he might, for the goal of his that clinched the argument.

Pools of water stood on the Crystal Palace pitch that afternoon, but the standard of play and the pace of it all was outstanding, as well they might be from two such sides as these :—

Corinthians—W. Campbell ; C. B. Fry, W. J. Oakley ; B. Middleditch, R. R. Barker, H. Vickers ; G. C. Vassall, R. E. Foster, G. O. Smith, G. P. Wilson, B. O. Corbett.

Aston Villa—George ; Spencer, Evans ; Bowman, Wilks, Mann ; Athersmith, Devey, Garraty, Wheldon, Smith.

Nine of those Corinthians and eight of Aston Villa in due course gained full international caps. That set the tone, and when Garraty heaved home Smith's centre to put the Villa ahead it seemed that the professionals would take control. But within moments of half-time Vassall made an equally dazzling touchline run which "Tip" Foster consummated for Corinth and in the end it was left to the incomparable "G.O." to settle matters 12 minutes from the end of a great game. It was a goal worthy of victory. Smith to Corbett down the left wing ; a sinuous dribble ; a return pass ; and "G.O." had whipped in an unstoppable left foot cross shot to the far corner which George must have heard rather than seen.

That would certainly be one memory as the smoke rings circle and the liqueur warms.

Then perhaps must come Corinth's most famous victory of all—their 10—3 defeat of Bury, the F.A. Cup holders, in the Sheriff of London Shield at Queen's Club on March 5, 1904. The particular significance of that feat was that it came at a moment when the Corinthians had begun to fall into the doldrums. Many had begun to fear that at last under pressure they were slipping from their lofty pinnacle of earlier days.

How this particular flower blossomed none could tell, certainly not M. M. Morgan-Owen, for so many years Captain, and later President, of The Casuals, who was Corinth's centre half that day. Sitting next to him at a football banquet some half a dozen years ago, one was carried away by his enthusiasm as he recalled that afternoon. He was pleased as Punch to have been a part of it all ; his eyes danced, but he could not explain how the miracle happened. The more so as Plant and Sagar had given Bury a two goal lead within the opening 10 minutes.

But something came to pass. Corinth swept back to their pinnacle imperiously and with five goals from S. S. Harris, three from G. S. Harris and two from S. H. Day, the following side gained a special niche for themselves in Corinthian history :—

T. S. Rowlandson ; Rev. W. Blackburn, W. U. Timmis ; H. Vickers, M. M. Morgan-Owen, H. A. Lowe ; G. C. Vassall, S. H. Day, G. S. Harris, S. S. Harris, B. O. Corbett.

All this belonged to an earlier vintage. But even between the two world wars, when life was becoming progressively more difficult and the old Corinthian standards had perhaps begun to fade in a world turning more and more to specialization, even then some of the old echoes could be raised from time to time by the young heirs of an old heritage.

At the end of the 1914-18 hostilities the Corinthians were faced with two major problems : (a) the need of a home ground, (b) a weakened programme caused by the sudden multiplication of the various leagues already in existence. A full representative fixture list was hard to arrange. In the event the future was met (a) by procuring a renovated Crystal Palace as a new home and (b) by deciding, after much careful consideration, to enter for the F.A. Cup. For this, the Club's ancient rule against playing for trophies was further amended to meet the case and the Football Association came half way by exempting the Club until the Competition proper.

True, the span of their life in the Cup between the years 1923 and 1937 paled against the grandiose, spacious days of their Golden Age around the turn of the century. But it is so hard to make an equation between different epochs. Had the Corinthian standards of play themselves lowered, or was the overall power around them now higher? If one said it was the latter, it could be nothing more than a hazard by one who did not live in the Golden Age.

But whatever the answer the Corinthians could still raise some sparks ; the goodwill and the affection which they still generated in the country warmed the heart. And in this new life of theirs they lived through three tremendous cup-ties, in two of which defeat brought its own special glory.

But first came a famous victory. On January 12, 1924, Blackburn Rovers arrived at the Crystal Palace in the first round proper of the Cup. Here in opposition once more were the champion enemies of old ; here was an echo of those exciting far-off days of the eighteen eighties. It was on Blackburn's backs that Corinth had first jumped to fame. Now they were to repeat the dose. When the news was out that night that A. G. Doggart's goal had given the amateurs a great victory, the acclaim of the country was general and sincere. The heroes that day were :—B. Howard Baker ; A. G. Bower, J. S. F. Morrison ; J. R. B. Mouldsdales, C. T. Ashton, L. B. Blaxland ; F. W. H. Nicholas, A. H. Phillips, F. N. S. Creek, A. G. Doggart, Lieut. K. E. Hegan.

But even more memorable was the defeat by Newcastle United in the fourth round (old second round) on January 29, 1927. Newcastle came to the Crystal Palace that day as leaders of the League Championship ; a crowd of 56,000 packed the ancient arena and the match was one of the early ones broadcast by the B.B.C.

Against all the odds and in a fever pitch of excitement, the Corinthians led by a great goal from Ashton from Hegan's pass at half-time. As time unwound itself and A. H. Chadder superbly mastered every manoeuvre by the brilliant little Hughie Gallacher, Newcastle's famous centre forward, the atmosphere became electric. Then with only 14 minutes left the end came suddenly and tragically. Newcastle equalised with a shot off a full back's shoulder ; with Jenkins off the field and Mouldsdales and Ewer injured at wing half back, the professionals rounded off a thrilling game with a last-ditch 3—1 victory.

Corinth had lost, but the men who all but turned the world upside down live on in the pages of the game :—B. Howard Baker ; A. G. Bower, A. E. Knight ; J. R. B. Mouldsdales, A. H. Chadder, F. H. Ewer ; A. E. Taylor, F. N. S. Creek, R. G. C. Jenkins, C. T. Ashton, K. E. Hegan.

And last, but by no means least, there were those three desperate ties against Millwall in January 1930. The first was drawn 2—2 at Crystal Palace before 45,000 spectators ; a 33,000 crowd saw another 1—1 draw at New Cross in the first replay. In the third game, played before a 60,000 gathering at Stamford Bridge, Millwall got home through strength by 5—1.

But it is the second of those ties of which one will speak, for it contained something truly Corinthian as the following side escaped from destruction in the lion's Den :—B. Howard Baker ; A. G. Bower, J. G. Knight ; A. H. Chadder, W. T. Whewell, F. H. Ewer ; R. W. V. Robins, F. N. S. Creek, C. T. Ashton, A. G. Doggart, K. E. Hegan.

After the match and some rough handling by the Millwall defenders, it transpired that Hegan had played for 85 minutes—including the extra half hour—with a broken leg. His tibia was fractured before half-time. Yet even during extra time he continued to outpace opponents and colleagues alike so that to this day that match has always been known as “Hegan's”.

Lord Kinnaird of old would have thoroughly approved of that performance.

Now if these were the sort of feats through history that made the name of Corinth what it was—and in many places, still is—the men who helped to fashion them had in the main graduated through the ranks of The Casuals. So close, indeed, had the two clubs grown that in 1923 they had set up a joint selection Committee the better to dispose their maximum forces, though even this on occasion caused some heart-searching !

After all, their aims were the same : simply to play football as well as possible, to enjoy the game and bring to it a spirit of chivalry. It is significant how often this quality was quickly reflected in opponents. The joint influence of the Corinthians and The Casuals across the years has gone deep indeed.

True, the Corinthians played the more glamorous role. But without The Casuals at their shoulder across the years they would surely have found it more difficult to find the right men to speak their lines. Here, certainly were two names. But to be one was very often to be the other.

The Casuals, without taking the front of the stage, none the less have had much of the fun and games that were going. History, indeed, tells us that they were entering for the F.A. Cup competition even before the Corinthians stepped down from their isolated pinnacle to compete for the Sheriff of London Shield. In fact, in the years 1891, 1892, and 1893, The Casuals reached the first round proper of the Cup where they lost successively to Aston Villa, Stoke, and Nottingham Forest, no mean feat when the entries had already soared to 180 competing clubs.

The early Casual fixture cards, in fact, bore such household names as Preston North End, Manchester City, Southampton, Woolwich Arsenal, Tottenham Hotspur, Newcastle United, Aston Villa, and others. Their great vintage years—like those of the Corinthians—when crops were rich, stretched through the closing years of the nineteenth century up till the first world war. Yet with it all their real bread and butter came to them in the formation of the Isthmian League in 1905, of which they became original members with London Caledonians, Civil Service, Ilford, Clapton, and Ealing.

It was there that the season's solid programme was based ; it was there that hard match practice was gained ; it was there that many a later Corinthian star was fashioned. Then, too, there were a variety of Cup competitions to test their strength—the F.A. Amateur Cup, London Charity Cup, London Senior Cup, A.F.A. Senior Cup, Surrey Senior Cup, etc., all of which they have prized on their sideboard at one time or another.

The greatest of The Casuals' triumphs in this field, of course, was their defeat, after a replay, of Ilford by 2 goals to 0 in the Final of the F.A. Amateur Cup in 1936. Curiously, they had contested the first Amateur Cup final of all in 1894 only to fall 2—1 to a powerful Old Carthusian side. But now 42 years later the fates relented and at last the chocolate and pink ribbons of The Casuals fluttered from the Amateur trophy.

That replay against a strong Ilford combination was held at Upton Park on May 3rd, 1936. For most of the opening half Ilford carried on where they had ended the first match, mounting a steady bombardment of The Casuals goal. But the defence held magnificently and at the change of ends there came the counter-attack. The Casuals' forwards now took control and their second half brilliance brought goals by Shearer and Webster that at long last captured the most coveted prize in the amateur field for one of the oldest and most distinguished of amateur clubs. The team that made history that May day was :—

Shearer, A. H. Fabian, B. A. Clements, W. H.
Webster, F. Riley.

Of that company Whewell, Joy, Shearer, Fabian, Webster and Riley were also members of the current Corinthian F.A. Cup side and each of them was the holder of many amateur international caps.

Following a gap of 20 years, 1956 once more brought something of a red letter day. It was on a bright April afternoon that the Corinthian-Casuals, now in hyphenated splendour and in white shirts, stepped out into the vast bowl of Wembley Stadium before some 90,000 spectators to do battle with Bishop Auckland in another Amateur Cup Final.

Their gallant struggle that gained them a replay up at Middlesbrough after a 1—1 draw in London, and their final defeat in the north-east, are too fresh in memory to need repetition. Fresh, too, is the story of M. J. Stewart's dramatic but unavailing dash by air across the Atlantic to try to reach Middlesbrough in time for that replay. He failed only by a few minutes to gain the place at inside forward that was awaiting him. Fresh also is the club's brave effort to reach Wembley for a third Amateur final only last season, an effort that just fell short at the semi-final on the threshold of yet another day to remember. None of this needs amplification at such short distance. But for the sake of posterity here is the Wembley Side of 1956 :—

P. Ahm ; F. C. M. Alexander, D. W. Newton ;
G. M. Shuttleworth, R. Cowan, R. C. Vowels ;
D. J. Insole, J. Sanders, J. S. Laybourne, G. C.
Citron, N. Kerruish.

Who would dare pick the best side of all those who have ever played for The Casuals ? Earlier, we quoted two elevens chosen independently and covering the first 20 years of the club. In the Jubilee publication of 1933, an official was brave enough to name his best Casual side between the years 1919 and 1933. It was :—

A. M. Wilkinson ; H. G. Payne, A. G. Bower ;
C. E. Glenister, N. Middelboe, F. H. Ewer ; M.
Howell, E. Martin, H. F. Dubuis, J. H. Lockton,
R. G. C. Pinfield.

Of those Bower, Glenister, Ewer, and Middelboe (captain of Denmark in the Olympic Games of 1908 and 1912 and later also captain of Chelsea) were all internationals and this was the side that pretty regularly represented The Casuals in the seasons 1922-23-24.

But to those, of course, must be added for close consideration the crop of the middle nineteen thirties. And here there leap to mind the names of B. Joy, E. D. R. Shearer, A. H. Fabian and W. H. Webster, all of them internationals and Corinthians. The present, too, can add its quota of fine names. But for obvious reasons they shall be nameless. It is only when one has grown grey or thatchless in the service of one's club that one can expect the luxury of true appreciation. . . .

And as for an all-time Corinthian side, that is open to God and men for argument. Who, for instance, would dare choose a full back pair from such giants as A. M. and P. M. Walters, W. J. Oakley, L. V. Lodge and C. B. Fry?

But of all the tireless officials behind the scenes over the years there can be no difference of opinion. Without them clubs disintegrate and here the Corinthians and The Casuals have certainly been able to thank their lucky stars. What Corinth owed in their day to such players and administrators as "Pa" Jackson himself, C. Wreford-Brown, A. T. B. Dunn, E. C. Bambridge, G. C. Bambridge and G. N. Foster—the honorary secretary when life was no longer a bed of roses—is beyond measurement.

They gave their all in whatever capacity they served, as have done their counterparts for The Casuals across the years—men such as S. L. King (Hon. Secretary from 1898 to 1913), Lt.-Col. M. M. Morgan-Owen, D.S.O. (first as Captain, then as President), P. A. Sergeant, S. F. Hepburn, Miles Howell, F. V. Smith, J. H. Lockton, R. P. Wakeford, and M. F. Coop. It is not too much to say that but for the work of "Sprouts" Hepburn in 1921 The Casuals might have sunk. And last but by no means least there comes the name of F. G. I. Packington, Hon. Secretary almost continuously since 1934. "Pack" is not expendable, he is indispensable, part of the Casual inventory, and more than one generation owe him more than it might care to admit.

In their fullest length and in their detail the lives of Corinth and The Casuals can offer inspiration to those who seek it. Not all of these last 75 years have been easy. Far from it. There was the sad, struggling period of a once great Corinthian tradition that finally led to the amalgamation in 1939 with their brothers The Casuals who now hold that tradition and that great name in trust for whatever the future may bring.

There was the disquietening period of the "amateur split", which dragged on across an arid desert of seven years from 1907 to 1914 when the family of footballers all but broke asunder until reason prevailed at last. The consequences of that "split" may be detected even today. The gulf, social and technical, between the amateur and the professional widened beneath the surface in certain circles. The professional game, during those seven years in the wilderness, came to be looked upon with distaste in various quarters, and a number of schools, forgetting their earlier traditions, changed from the Association to the Rugby code.

Even today, though the original pioneers of Association in the schools, as well as the solid core of the Arthur Dunn competition, have remained true to their ideals, antipathy still exists in places. The Corinthians and The Casuals throughout their existence have always maintained the closest links with school football. Indeed, since the last war the Corinthian-Casuals have extended their interest and connections in this important field with a carefully arranged series of trial games, leading up to representative matches between the selected Schools XI, the Club itself, and a London Grammar Schools XI.

Praise cannot be too high for all this sympathetic work. Yet an even deeper problem exists. It is the gradual flight of certain Grammar Schools away from Association. The reasons need not be examined here, but briefly they are social and a part of a certain misplaced class consciousness. And it is hard to combat. Nor is the struggle made any easier for such as the Corinthian-Casuals and their colleagues, the TRUE amateurs, who find themselves surviving in a world of changing values, a world of sport which, as The Observer recently pointed out, was now torn by the jagged boundaries of amateurism.

To be, or not to be? That would seem to be the subtle and contemporary question in all sport in the mid-twentieth century, from the Olympic Games downwards. At present there would appear to be two extreme poles—the true professional and the true amateur, each of whom has taken a clear stand in society. In between those two points exists a shadowy no-honest-man's-land which is as disturbing for one pole as it is for the other.

What the next 25 years will bring forth none can foretell. In the new space age we may soon see the heavens filled with shining sputniks calling upon the rest of the world in a giant blaze of advertising to DRINK VODKA. Who can tell? But one thing is fairly certain. Upon the Corinthian-Casuals, and upon the shoulders of others like them, rests a vast responsibility towards the schools and towards their own ideals. They will need a united front to survive.

But sometimes, if the balance is right, the eye is clear, and the mind set firm, the last strokes leading on to a century can be the finest, the most scintillating of all. The next 25 strokes of the calendar towards the centenary season of 1982-83 may yet prove the most momentous of all. There is a duty to be done, and as the poet says: "at noonday in the bustle of man's worktime greet the unseen with a cheer".

Play on the Corinthians and The Casuals !

Ceremony of the Loving Cup

The procedure at Skinners' Hall is as follows:—

Each diner rises as his neighbour is taking the Loving Cup and, the other having turned to him, he bows, is drunk to, takes the cup, bows again ; then, turning to the next gentleman, he bows, drinks to him, wipes the cup with the napkin, and hands it to him. They bow. He remains standing facing the same way until the cup has been passed on once more. Thus each diner stands so long as his neighbour is holding the cup, and there are always three persons standing, but never more than three to each Loving Cup.
