

NOTES

1. I have used the word COCOA throughout as I consider it unnecessary to use the awkward CACAO except to distinguish the various Theobroma species.

2. The word "rehabilitation" has been used in two senses: first, the ordinary dictionary sense - to restore to its former position, and second, a particular form of replanting in which a percentage of the old trees is replaced by young plants. I trust that in each case the sense of the word is clear.
