

ABSTRACT

This research paper was carried out to find out if high food prices really do impact households in Trinidad and Tobago. Caroni was the chosen location for the survey to be conducted. It is a rural village located in Central Trinidad and was the centre of the Sugar Cane Industry in Trinidad and Tobago. High Food prices is a problem not only plaguing Trinidad and Tobago but also the world at large. Since it has been on a constant rise in Trinidad and Tobago over the past few years, this research was conducted with the citizens of this country in mind and to find out their take on the entire issue. The survey was conducted using questionnaires and the results were analyzed using the SPSS data entry system.