

A group is surveying during 2016's Bioblitz at the Botanic Gardens in Port-of-Spain.

Volunteers will explore Icacos in this year's Bioblitz.

Nature seekers on Bioblitz this weekend

So, what exactly is a Bioblitz? Bioblitz is an intense event, where volunteers attempt to find as many living species as possible in 24 hours within a designated area.

People align themselves with groups of their interest, for example, mammals, marine & aquatic, botany, herpetology and birding.

Now in its sixth year, the T&T Bioblitz will be headed to the southwesternmost tip of Trinidad, as scientists and nature enthusiasts go to Icacos on November 4 and 5.

A release said the surveys begin at noon on Saturday, November 4, and at noon on Sunday, November 5, following which, at 4 pm, results of the species totals found will be announced.

Possible survey areas this year include Soldado Rock, Icacos Great Lagoon, Columbus Bay and mud volcanoes. On past Bioblitzes, more than 700 species have been identified at each event.

On the Sunday morning, from 7 am to 2 pm, the public is invited to visit this year's basecamp at the Icacos Government Primary School, where coordination of the event activities will occur.

At the school, the displays will be setup, identification of unknown plants and animals will take place and members of the public can interact with volunteers to find out what has been found and also take part in the action, through brief guided nature walks with experts.

The T&T Bioblitz is organised by the T&T Zoology Museum in conjunction with the T&T Field Naturalists' Club.

Sponsorship of this event has been provided by First Citizens' Bank and Bermudez.

• To find out how to get involved, visit the T&T Bioblitz Facebook page and follow for live updates of this year's event.
