

Panmen get 'peace chat' from lawman

Guardian Police Reporter

THE POLICE are leaving no stone unturned to forge a link of friendship and understanding among steelbandsmen.

Inspector Rupert Garvin, promoted to the rank only a few weeks ago, has been appointed liaison man between the police, the steelbandsmen and the National Association of Trinidad and Tobago Steelbandsmen.

Within the past few weeks, Inspector Garvin has visited the camps of 24 steelbands in St. James, Belmont, Woodbrook, Port-of-Spain and San Juan giving pep talks, hints, and suggestions.

Today, Inspector Garvin is to meet a cross-section of band-leaders to continue the police campaign of establishing peace and harmony among the steelbandsmen.

Commenting on the campaign, Inspector Garvin said: "They are responding very very well. Prospects for an incident-free Carnival are good!"
