The photo hasn't come through particularly sharply, but I am pretty sure that this is a photo taken on the West Indies tour of England 1939. It was obviously taken at one of the tour matches (not a Test match) and includes what looks like twelve of the West Indian tourists, the West Indies manager and another team. The chap in the striped blazer in the middle of the front row looks a little like Capt. J.W.A. Stephenson the Essex captain (although the image isn't clear enough to tell for sure), so the photo may have been taken at Chelmsford when the West Indians played Essex.
