

Abstract

This project is meant to analyze papaya production in a CARICOM country, namely Trinidad. By compiling information based on the competitive of local production compared to foreign competition, it can be deduced whether it is an advantage to continue production. By using references based on the MAFAS technology on a retrospective approach, data was collected from Namdevco, and Marcus Mycoo of Crop Protection.