

S U M M A R Y.

The literature on the subject is reviewed. Ecological work on aquatic, marsh and rice soils is described, and the conclusions drawn are considered in relation to the manurial problems involved in rice cultivation. The role played by blue green algae, bacteria and enzymes in the fixing of nitrogen, and the effect of organic matter in swamp rice soils are also dealt with.